

A network diagram is overlaid on the text. It consists of numerous circular nodes in various colors (grey, purple, pink, red, orange, yellow) connected by thin, semi-transparent lines of corresponding colors. The nodes are distributed across the text, with some appearing as clusters and others as single points. The lines connect nodes both horizontally and diagonally, creating a complex web-like structure that spans the entire width of the image.

The searched term describes the movement of people and goods from place. Together with communication-the movement of ideas-it has been essential in bringing about the integration of regions and nations into a single world community. It is, combined into various systems and networks, are by way of land, water, and air and by such means as automobile, airplane, railroad, ship, and pipeline.